What Kids Say About TCS

Over the last few weeks, as part of our 2022 Annual Appeal, we've been posting and sharing what we love best about The Children's School as adults. But what do kids have to say? We interviewed kids from several different grades asking them what they liked best about TCS, and here's what they said:

Let's keep TCS a magical place where kids love to learn!

Winter Solstice Celebration

TCS classrooms took turns sharing time around a crackling fire, enjoying hot tea and animal crackers, while learning more about the astronomical, historical, and cultural significance of the winter solstice around the world.

The event, in lieu of a canceled Woods Day, reinforced the connections between human civilization and nature, and connections between human societies around the world who observe quarterly and cross-quarterly annual holidays in multiple ways.

Thanks to science teacher, Mr. Will Hudson, for spearheading this segue into our winter break. Mr. Hudson says our next celebration will be at the cross-quarter mark in February, halfway between the solstice and Spring equinox.

More of What We Love About TCS

On social media this season, we're showcasing some of the aspects of a TCS education that we love. We know not everyone follows Facebook, LinkedIn, or Instagram, so we're sharing more of our posts below for you to enjoy:

Group Gathering each morning to sing and plan our day.

We know that play & learning is sometimes messy and that's ok!

Small student/teacher ratio means lots of individual attention.

"Wednesdays in the Woods" for nature play and learning.
